PREFACE

This list is intended to assist in the identification and correction of obsolete subject headings in bibliographic records. Through references in the form of the instruction "Search under" it identifies those headings that were previously valid and their current forms from 1976 through 1990. All cross-references in this publication also appear in Library of Congress Subject Headings (LCSH), 14th edition (1991).

Beginning early in 1989 the staff of the Subject Headings Editorial Section of the Office for Subject Cataloging Policy under the direction of the section head, Ron Goudreau, began to inspect past weekly lists of subject headings, working their way backwards from the present. When existing USE references from former headings were found, they were coded as earlier form of heading by setting byte 2 (third position) of the w control subfield of the 4XX field to the value "e". When it was discovered that a heading was changed without a reference having been made, the staff added and coded the reference. Also beginning in 1989 newly changed headings included the references with the appropriate coded byte. By January 1991 the editorial staff had completed review of all weekly lists back through 1976, and it was decided to publish the results. Future editions are expected as additional coding is completed.

This listing was generated by a computer program that found all 4XX fields with a w control subfield containing byte 2 (third position) set to "e" in the subject authority file at the Library of Congress on January 9, 1991.

Caution is advised when using this list to make corrections to bibliographic records. The current heading itself must be inspected in LCSH to determine the exact correction to be made. What appears to be a simple one-to-one change in this list may be very complex. The updating of headings should be undertaken by experienced staff. Computer manipulation in bibliographic records of information that appears in this compilation may result in the generation of errors. Several peculiarities are noted below.

The correct location of geographic subdivisions must be determined. For example, the old heading Automobiles--Road guides was further divided by place, resulting in headings like Automobiles--Road guides--France. The new heading is Automobile travel--Guide-books. However, the subdivision --Guide-books is not further divided by place, and the heading above must be changed to Automobile travel--France--Guide-books. If the old headings are converted in a mechanical way, they will be incorrectly converted to Automobile travel--Guide-books--France, which is an invalid construction.

Similarly if a phrase heading changed to a heading with a subdivision, the resulting heading must be inspected in LCSH to determine the proper location of geographic subdivisions. For example, the heading Afro-American families changed to Afro-Americans--Families, but Afro-American families--Georgia must be changed to Afro-Americans--Georgia--Families. It was not possible to show in this list the changed position of the geographic subdivision.

A cross-reference from the earlier form of name is made only at the heading level if the "a" subfield of the heading is changed. For example, the heading European War, 1914-1918 was changed to World War, 1914-1918. It is not sufficient to correct old records by simply changing the word "European" to "World". It is necessary to inspect the subdivisions to determine which ones remain valid and which should be changed. For example, the subdivision --Food question under the former heading changed to the subdivision --Food supply, but this can be determined only by consulting the list of subdivisions usable under wars.

Another specific example of problems with subdivisions is shown with the change of the heading Ship-building to Shipbuilding. In this case the subdivision --Supplies also changed. The replacement of Ship-building--Supplies with Shipbuilding--Equipment and supplies is not reflected in the compilation of cross references nor is it printed in LCSH. Subdivisions under a changed heading must be matched against LCSH and appropriate subdivision lists to ensure that they are still valid.

If a phrase heading was changed into a heading with a free-floating subdivision that was not printed in LCSH, the reference does not appear in this compilation. For example, the heading Alcohol and women was changed to Women--Alcohol use but the resulting heading was not established and printed because it used a free-floating subdivision. It is expected that a later edition of this list will contain those headings in order to show the reference from the cancelled form.

Where a heading has been replaced by more than one heading, it is generally necessary to review each bibliographic record to determine which of the new headings should be applied. For example, Labor and laboring classes refers to three new headings: Working class; Labor movement; and Labor. In fact, many records would require only one new heading, some would require headings different from these, and a few could have the obsolete heading deleted because other headings already present in the record adequately represent the subject.

In other cases where one heading could have been replaced by several headings, the entire range of possibilities may not be present, since the changes reflect only the new headings appropriate to the Library of Congress's collections. For example, the parenthesized expression (in religion, folklore, etc.) could have been replaced by any of three subdivisions: --Religious aspects, --Mythology, or --Folklore. Those responsible for updating headings should not automatically use the subdivision indicated in this list but should evaluate their own materials and use the appropriate subdivision. For example, this list contains a reference from Ships (in religion, folk-lore, etc.) to Ships--Folklore, but this subdivision may be inappropriate for some materials held by other libraries, which should use whichever of the three subdivisions is appropriate.

The filing order for this publication is word by word, without regard for punctuation or the LC Filing Rules. Multiple references from a single former heading are arranged in record number order.

A print programming problem resulted in the omission of the terminal period from the word "etc." The period is present in the authority records.

The record numbers represent the subject authority record numbers for the current headings. It is recommended that the subject authority record for the current heading and its subdivisions be consulted before changing bibliographic records.

Omissions and errors that are identified will be rectified in the next edition. Questions about the contents of this publication should be referred to:
